

Dynamic Positioning Training

Delivered by a world-class training provider

With the continued expansion of the offshore markets, the need for qualified Dynamic Positioning Operators and Maintainers has never been greater. In supporting the needs of shipping companies and individuals alike, Bibby Ship Management provides accredited training programmes for those wishing to take the next step in their careers by training to become Dynamic Positioning Operators and Maintainers.

Dynamic positioning is an onboard system used to maintain a pre-determined position or track. In calculating a vessels heading and position, then comparing these to the desired position, the dynamic positioning system can determine if a positioning error has occurred. The system can be used to apply the required thruster action necessary to re-position the vessel. Historically this was achieved through analogue systems. Today however, fully integrated computer and electronic systems are now far more common.

Used extensively in the offshore industry, dynamic positioning equipment can be found onboard vessels requiring precise positioning such as drilling, cable and pipe laying, dive and ROV support and FPSO vessels, as well as jack-up barges. Dynamic positioning equipment is also used extensively on vessels and units operating in deep water and areas of environmental sensitivity where traditional anchoring techniques are not possible.

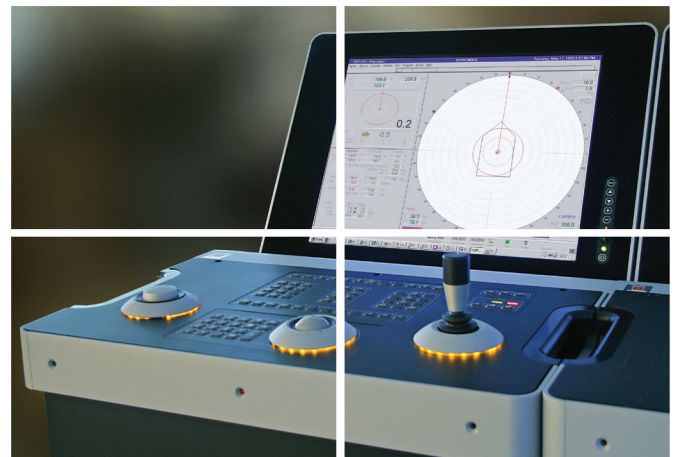

As Nautical Institute accredited training providers and members of IMCA, Bibby Ship Management provide world-class training on:

- Dynamic Positioning Familiarisation
